Contact Possibilities for those affected by disadvantage, discrimination, sexualized violence and bullying

It is the right of all affected persons to seek counselling in cases of discrimination, bullying, stalking, sexual harassment and violence as well as in cases of exploitation of dependency relationships and abuse of power. The initial contact can be made by the affected person or by a third party. Official channels do not have to be observed (§ 7, para. 2 of the guideline for respectful cooperation). Various contact persons are available for (initial) consultation and support. The person concerned is free to make independent use of internal and external counseling services.

Please note that the complaint is an official notification to the university. The complaint will result in official proceedings and may lead to further investigation, even if the complainant withdraws the complaint. In contrast to counselling, it is not possible for the complainant to remain anonymous in the complaint procedure.

Further (external) contact points: the anonymous counselling service of the women's counseling center Lilith as well as the men's counseling service at KIM Soziale Arbeit e.V.
